Two and a Half Men Solution

There are three sets of analogies in this puzzle, each working differently.

- “On Call” has analogies between classifications in the Dewey Decimal System and in the Library of Congress system which are the same. For instance, the Dewey 160 and the Library of Congress BC are both for books on logic. The Library of Congress classification that agrees with 360 is H, which is the answer to “On Call.”

- “First Impressions” takes the rhythm of the beginning of each piece of music and converts it into Morse Code. For instance, Beethoven's 5th symphony, Movement 1 begins with the famous bam-bam-bam-baaam, which corresponds to the Morse ...- , which is the letter V. Applying this to Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor gives the letter U, which the answer to “First Impressions.”

- In “Game Night,” the correspondence is between a game and the value of its most valuable space/result/tile/etc. For instance, the most valuable property in Monopoly is Boardwalk, which cost $400. Applying this to Risk gives 7, which is the value of the most valuable continent, Asia. Converting this to a letter gives G, the answer to “Game Night.”

Reading these together gives HUG, which is the answer.
